Presentation

When we talk about possible or hypothetical situations with If ..., we can use a first conditional or second conditional structure. Study the table below.

Structure	Examples and use
First conditional If I do ..., I'll (= I will) ... Instead of will , we can use other modal verbs, e.g. can , might , may , must , should .	According to the weather forecast, it might rain tonight. If it rains, I'll stay at home. We use the first conditional when there is a real possibility that something will happen in the future. If I don't call you tonight, you can call me. Will you wait for me if I am late?
Second conditional If I did ..., I'd (= I would) ... Instead of would , we can use could or might .	At the moment, it's raining. If it was sunny, I'd go out. We use the second conditional when we imagine a situation or when there is very little or no possibility that something will happen. What would you do if you found a lot of money in the street? If it wasn't dark outside, we could go out.

Things to remember

- We do not use will or would in the if-part of a conditional sentence:
If it ~~will~~ rain rains, I'll stay at home.
- The if-part of the sentence can go at the beginning or at the end:
If it rains, I'll stay at home. I'll stay at home if it rains.
- In the second conditional we use if + past (if I did, if I didn't, etc.), but the meaning is not past. In this type of structure, the past tense refers to an imaginary or hypothetical situation, such as finding a lot of money in the street:
What would you do if you found a lot of money in the street?
- In a first conditional sentence, we can use when instead of if for things that we are sure will happen:
When she comes, I'll call you.

Practice 3

Look at the situations below. Decide if they are impossible/hypothetical or possible and form a conditional sentence for each one. Where possible, try to use other modal verbs instead of will or would, for example can, could, might, may, should, must. Examples:

If it rains this weekend, I may not go out.

If I had a vacation next week, I might go to Portugal.

It will rain this weekend.

You live in another country.

You will have a vacation next week.

You can fly.

You speak English fluently.

You will meet the president of your country.

You will win the lottery.

You will be late for your next lesson.

Your country will win the World Cup.

You will go out tonight with some friends.

You will go to bed later than usual tonight.
